Considerable excitement was caused here about mid-night Tuesday, when American soldiers patrolling the line west of the city limits, fired upon a small bunch of Mexicans who had crossed the international line, presumably for the purpose of running off a herd of horses. The major has completed arrangements for taking care of 10,000 American troops, mostly militiamen from northern and eastern states, the first of which arrived yesterday morning from Utah. The quartermaster's big office force will be located up stairs in the Lyric building, space having been secured in the mammoth Westcoast warehouse for government supplies. Yesterday J. E. Clay, who for some time past has been engaged in the automobile business in Hermosillo, with a party of friends arrived in the city last Sunday, after a very strenuous hike across the country to the international border, at Sasabe. The trip was made in a big Buick, which did wonders on the long journey, having outrun Mexican bullets several times, until within a few feet of the American line, when a squad of Mexican soldiers held the party up at the point of rifles, when the faithful Buick surrendered to superior numbers, and Mr. Clay and party, which included two American ladies, were compelled to walk. After considerable delay another automobile was secured and the party came on to Nogales, hot, dusty, tired and angry. To say they are glad to be here, is putting it mild. Mr. Clay will appeal to General Calles for the return of his confiscated property.

As a result of the Governor's visit, the following communication was sent to mayors of all cities in southern Arizona, by Mayor Claggett:
